CAMPAIGN SPENDING WEBSITE SEETHEMONEY.COM

The Secretary of State's office under the direction of Secretary Reagan has worked tirelessly to introduce transparency wherever possible. To that end, one of Secretary Reagan's key transparency focuses has been transparency in campaign finance. With the latest update to SeeTheMoney.com platform, the public can easily see all of the transactions for Arizona's state candidates, political action committees and more.

Over the last six months, the Secretary of State's office has been working to make the initial beta version of SeeTheMoney.com better and easier to navigate, so that users can easily find the data they are searching for. The newest version of SeeTheMoney.com was released last Friday and it is a significant update from the previous version, incorporating the feedback we have received from our partners, the media, and the public.

These are some of the most important changes that have been made to SeeTheMoney.com in the latest version, but they certainly aren't the only ones. Secretary Reagan has made it a priority to release SeeTheMoney.com, making it easier for the public to see where money is flowing in Arizona's elections. Over time we will continue to fine-tune the website to make it even easier for the public to access this information.

CLOSING LIBRARIES

An article has been making its way across the internet about public libraries. The author attempted to make the argument that public libraries in communities across the country should be closed and that Amazon Books and shops like Starbucks, that provide internet for customers, should take over the role that libraries have historically played in our communities. He asserts many of the services that libraries provide are now made redundant because of the private services that exist throughout our communities and that libraries aren't worth the money.

This struck a nerve with many people around the country, from librarians, to citizens, to parents and teachers and many more – and rightfully so. Many people may not know this but, the Arizona Secretary of State's office oversees our state libraries. For that reason, I have...

STATE PRIMARY EARLY BALLOT TRACKER

Curious how many early ballots have been already returned? Secretary Reagan directed her Elections Tech Team to develop a brand new tracking system where people can see how many early ballots have been returned to Arizona's County Recorders. Visit www.Arizona.Vote to find out how many votes are in and even track where your ballot is.
